Artesian Wells.

[From the San Francisco Chranicle.] Artesian wells, the sinking of which was first practiced in the province of Artois, France, whence they derive their name, find their fullest value in the arid plains of Calicertained. Of the more widely celebrated artesian wells, one at Aire, in Artois, France, which was bored more than one hundred years ago, has since then flowed steadily, the water rising eleven feet above the surface at the rate of 259 gallons a minute. A well at Lilliers, Bus-de-Caluis, has flowed without the diminution of a gallon in the hourly supply since it was bored in 1126, or for a period of nearly eight hundred years. On February 26, 1841, the famous Grenelle well in the Paris basin, commenced in 1833. penetrated at a depth of 1,797 feet the arch of rocks over the subterranean waters, and in a few hours the waters rose to the surface in an immense volume and with great violence. To check the supply a vertical pipe was raised many feet into the air, in which the water rises and flows over. The water is perfectly limpid and flows at the rate of 500,000 gallons in twenty-four hours. The well at Passy fur-NOTICE.—The Board of Directors of this nishes 5,500,000 gallons per day.
